IRON SWORD, SMALL SILVER SCROLL FROM LEHI’S DAY DISCOVERED

A meter-long iron sword has been discovered recently by archaeologists digging at Vered Jericho, three miles south of modern Jericho. The sword dates to the seventh century B.C., during the lifetime of Lehi. "It was in quite bad shape," reports excavator Avraham Eitan in the July/August issue of the Biblical Archaeology Review, p. 33. "I believe that we have the haft and even the tip. The haft is of bronze with some wood remains." This is the first complete sword of this period and of this size ever to be found. "We do know of swords this size from Assyria [pictured on wall reliefs], but nothing like this, as far as I know, has been found before," Eitan reports. Only the unique and extremely dry conditions around Jericho allowed the remains of this sword to survive. Even at that, the sword is extremely fragile and badly deteriorated. The tempered tip survived intact.

In another dig, in Jerusalem, archaeologists in 1979 uncovered a burial cave dating to the time of Lehi. The cave had collapsed long ago and thus was never looted by grave robbers. Until now, the excavators have declined to disclose the nature of the treasure trove they had uncovered. Among the pottery and jewelry amazingly found there were two extraordinary silver scroll-shaped charms. On these small metal scrolls were inscriptions of the priestly benediction found in Numbers 6:24–26. The text appears to be the earliest Biblical text extant. A museum exhibit of these artifacts has just been announced and is opening this summer in Jerusalem.

Further information about these significant finds is eagerly awaited. These archaeological discoveries, dating to the time of Lehi, may prove to have considerable relevance to the Book of Mormon. The use of tempered, carburized iron (steel) for swords (1 Ne. 4:9) has been noted before in the F.A.R.M.S. 1986–87 Catalog, p. 12; SOR-82a; HAM-85; and SOR-85, p. 286. On the ancient writing of religious texts on metal, see WRI-81; GRI-81; and CHE-84 (discussed below in this newsletter).
ANNUAL REPORT

We are pleased to report how the Foundation’s money has been spent this 1985–86 fiscal year. This year has shown significant growth in many areas. The number of research grants has grown to 14 this year. The number of reports and articles now available is over 300 and still growing. Over 26,250 reprints and preliminary reports, and more than 2,000 books, videos, and critical texts were distributed this year, worldwide.

All money received by F.A.R.M.S. comes from individual donors or foundations and is very much appreciated. One hundred twenty-seven people contributed $100 or more this year. Twenty-one gave $500 or more. Each dollar makes it possible for research to continue and for distribution services to expand.

Our objective is to make materials available on a non-profit basis. Prices are set at break-even levels. We are pleased to report that direct sales expenses (cost of goods sold, postage, and handling) and sales income were within 1% of each other for the fiscal year. Our goal is also to keep overhead as low as possible and to use each dollar donated for service and research needs. F.A.R.M.S. expenses for the 1985–86 fiscal year were allocated as follows:

Research grants and assistantships . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 37.8%
Two catalogs (1985 and 1986–87) . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 23.4%

Corporate officers and directors . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 0.0%

We take special note of certain facts that have kept our expenses low this year: the board of directors, advisory board, president and treasurer of the Foundation serve without salary; no direct promotional costs were incurred this year aside from printing a few small fund-raising information sheets.

SPECIAL BYU STUDIES ISSUE ON MORONI

The recent issue of BYU Studies contains five significant articles about Joseph Smith’s early years. Subjects such as treasure seeking and seership are analyzed particularly in light of newly discovered documents. The contributors are Dean Jesse, Ron Walker, Marvin Hill, and Richard Anderson. Copies of this issue (volume 24, number 4) may be ordered for $4.00 from 1102 JKH, Brigham Young University, Provo, UT 84602.

THE SACRAMENT PRAYERS STUDIED: FROM BENJAMIN TO MORONI

Latter-day Saints most commonly turn to D&C 20:76–79 to find the texts of the sacrament prayers they regularly use on Sundays. In fact, however, the words for these prayers came from the Nephites. In a new report listed on the attached order form, the textual history of the sacrament prayers is studied, from Benjamin’s words in Mosiah 5, to Jesus’ words in 3 Nephi 18, to the final texts in Moroni 4–5. “I find it impressive,” comments John Sorenson. “What we have in these texts is exactly what one would expect from an orderly, true-to-life cultural history.” Certain precise terms and ideas persist in these texts, despite being separated from each other by many years and pages of Nephite history. Furthermore, the logical development from one text to the next can be appreciated, especially as the old Nephite covenant text became “new” in light of the words of Jesus to the people gathered at the temple in Bountiful. Jewish antecedents for the Nephite sacrament, as well as parallels with early Christian eucharistic texts, are also pointed out. “We have here,” reflects Jack Welch, “is perhaps the greatest legacy we have received from the Book of Mormon—sacred prayers from the Nephite experience in the presence of the resurrected Jesus—which we use each week. After working with this material, I shall never think of the sacrament prayers quite the same again.”

HISTORICAL REPORT ON APRIL–JUNE 1829 COMPLETED

The February 1976 issue of Insights gave a short report on the question of how long it took Joseph Smith to translate the Book of Mormon as we have it today. That work began in earnest on April 7, 1829, and was completed by the end of June. A lengthy report may now be ordered chronicling, day by day, a documented history of this intense period of activity. “It is quite staggering,” remarks Jack Welch, “when you realize all that was going on in those few days. Besides sustaining the exhausting task of continual translating, Joseph and Oliver were also out looking for odd jobs to earn money for food and supplies, they made at least one trip to Coleville, moved from Harmony to Fayette, proselyted regularly, restored the priesthood, baptized, entertained visitors, were with the Three and Eight Witnesses, and received over a dozen other revelations, among other things.” This new report, complete with copies of the relevant primary historical sources, also discusses the order in which the Book of Mormon texts were translated.

METAL PLATES VIDEO NOW AVAILABLE

With the recent discovery of a large treasure trove of burial objects in Jerusalem (described in a preceding article), attention has been drawn again to the ancient practice of writing on metal. While we await further information about these artifacts, we draw renewed attention to Paul Cheesman’s recent production, “So Let It Be Written” (see F.A.R.M.S. Newsletter, June 1984). This film is now available on VHS video for only $25.00. It shows instances of writing on metal plates, particularly on golden plates or objects, from many parts of the ancient world. It is highly suitable for general audiences. A companion volume by Paul Cheesman entitled Ancient Writing on Metal Plates (Bountiful: Horizon Publishers and Distributors, 1985), ISBN 0-88290-303-9, 93 pp., is available through general LDS bookstores and dealers.

474 SPERRY REPRINT OFFERED

Early in his career, Dr. Sidney B. Sperry published a book which offers many fine insights into certain literary aspects of the Book of Mormon, but which has been out of print for several decades. Selected chapters from this book, now available as a reprint (SP-O UR), give “considerable attention to the analysis of the Book of Mormon as a whole and to its constituent records,” and makes pioneering efforts to study “the literary forms in this scripture.” Attention is also given to relations with the Old Testament, the documentary hypothesis, the Sermon on the Mount, and other New Testament passages. The other chapters in this book, dealing, for example, with the Isaiah question and with the religious concepts of universal appeal in the Nephite records, were reprinted in Dr. Sperry’s Book of Mormon Compendium, which is still in print. For an excellent overview of Dr. Sperry’s lifetime study of the Book of Mormon, see Ellis Rasmussen’s biographical essay (RAS-84) on the attached order form.

PHOTOCOGRAPHC ESSAY OF ANCIENT AMERICA

Copies of Paul Cheesman’s 1978 Book of Mormon Lands: A Photographic Essay may now be ordered through F.A.R.M.S. This beautiful but hard-to-find 158-page book of color plates was published in collaboration with Blaine T. Hudson and won awards for its high-quality graphics. It offers 155 impressionistic scenes taken from many times and places depicting phrases and verses from the Book of Mormon. While not a technical archaeological treatment of the subject, this large book is a fine addition for the artistically sensitive collector.
VOLUNTEER NETWORK

The strength of F.A.R.M.S. has always been its volunteer base. Many volunteers find their service very satisfying. During the past twelve months, under the vigorous direction of Les Campbell, the F.A.R.M.S. volunteer network has expanded and solidified. Volunteers all over the world, as well as in Provo, regularly continue to help with distribution, translation, firesides, introducing people to F.A.R.M.S., checking address lists, conducting local fund-raising activities, purchasing and placing Book of Mormon-related materials in local libraries, holding open houses, organizing reading groups or student clubs, conducting research, working with local book stores, and many other activities.

After completing each project, local volunteers submit a report of their activities. Some of the comments in these reports include the following:

"I'm personally impressed by the wonderful materials F.A.R.M.S. is producing and look forward to receiving future materials from you. More cassettes and video lectures would be helpful. I plan to be even more active in promoting F.A.R.M.S. here in my area this year and believe members will show more interest as F.A.R.M.S. becomes better known."—Danny Arnold, Orange Park, Florida

"Response to F.A.R.M.S. has been excellent and I must say that response from F.A.R.M.S. has been superb."—Craig Hartman, Lakewood, Colorado

"I organized and presented a showing of our slide set, 'Faith of an Observer.' It was extremely well received. The Nibley video represents a choice personal opportunity for many who may never meet him in person to share in the mind-expanding insights of his work and research. I am glad to realize that F.A.R.M.S. is the only place which I can recommend to help you in any way I can."—Ron Shumaker, Beaverton, Oregon

"I am really excited about F.A.R.M.S. I would like to suggest we should work more closely with other local areas."—Darrel Hird, Thornton, Colorado

Our deep appreciation goes to the

In addition, many others have rendered significant service in the Provo area. Richard Olsen took dozens of hours to design and produce the new F.A.R.M.S. 1986-87 Catalog.
With the assistance of Les Campbell and Jack Welch, the 1985 Catalog was expanded to 24
pages, adding an author listing, graphics, and several new features. Richard, Greg McMurrie and Teri Bergstrom have also recently redesigned the cover sheets for the F.A.R.M.S. preliminary reports and reprints, so that the necessary information will be more visible in the racks at Deseret Book stores where many F.A.R.M.S. materials are regularly displayed and sold. Others, including Daryl Hague, Brenda Johnson, Don Norton and John Bricky, have worked liberally as proofreaders and source checkers. Douglas Clark has edited much of Hugh Nibley’s work on Abraham. Other Provo area volunteers and assistants this year have also included Richard Erickson, Lori Erickson, Jim Bell, Anna Norton, Margaret
Norton, Julia Norton, Don Parry, Heide Holt,
Denise Sartain, Beth Cole, Richard Steelman,
Aaron Campbell, Laura Campbell, Spencer
Campbell, James Welch, Jim Backman,

others.

Significant research papers have also been received from Lowell Tensmeyer (Indiana), Ronald Messer (Idaho), Paul Cheesman
(Utah), Charles Grosso (New Mexico), Larry
Browning (Utah), Eugene England (Utah),
Randall Spackman (California), Susan Easton
(Utah), Deloy Pack (Utah), Larry Lewis

If you are interested in serving as a volunteer or if you have suggestions or research papers to submit, please write to Les Campbell, F.A.R.M.S., P.O. Box 7113,

local volunteers and report on their activities
receive the scholarly Updates each month,
two free F.A.R.M.S. papers for each project
